The Foreign News.

The most important feature of the news by the Weser and Borussia, is the intelligence o the investment of Peschiera, the north-western fortress of the historic square, into which the Austrians have retreated, by the Piedmontese troops. We are a little curious to see how long this celebrated stronghold will stand against the improved ordnance of the Allied Army. The Austrians have withdrawn from the line of the river Mincio, and the main body of the army had fallen back on Verona, after having destroyed all the by far a greater order and accuracy in their bridges in the line of their retreat. From Our Enropean Correspondent. Panis, June 25th, 1859.

After a thirteen days' journey on the Bre men screw steamer " New York," we arrived yesterday morning off Cowes, on the Isle of Wight, and I, with a great number of fellowtravelers, was taken up to Southampton on a in Paris and other large places, are indeed small paddle-wheel steamer. I never before had an opportunity to see "Old England," may be the case, I will relate in a few words the impression it made on me. In the first ed, when I saw those gigantic as well as eleplace, I mention an organized system of shaving travelers, which is not equalled in any of those countries I traveled or lived in before; and their number is not small. The beginning of the shaving system we experienced as soon as we set our foot on land, at the oustom-house. I and a few others understood, by chance, that it was not necessary for those passengers going to France to get their bagthat to us, neither was there any printed or written notice to that effect; but they went their precious services, from every traveler of the custom-house officers that my baggage was to go directly to Havre.

The continuation of the shaving system we experienced in the hotels, where we stopped till the Havre steamer left. Although your reporter and his companions were humble second class passengers, we had to pay for everything enormously; for instance, a glass of beer six pence and a ci gar, of a very common quality, eight pence. And what they call eight pence, really means twenty cents United States money. When you give in pay for eight pence a United States quarter, they only return you two coppers; and a gold dollar they call four American money as they they think of using in England, in the United States, for English money: otherwise, they will lose from 10 to 20 per cent. The third act of shaving was played against us, when we went on board the Havre steamer. Although we had paid our fare from New York to Havre, we had to pay two pence admission fee to the river, where the Havre steamer laid and on the steamer itself again one shilling for a berth. Some of the passengers did not want to sleep at all, but preferred to stay up all night, beand required, in most cases, two men to put us the opinion, that a country, where such der one roof and having the appearance of military barracks. The other part of Southampton has the appearance of all those old European cities, which have been built up gradually in the course of a great many conturies. It contains—but I perceive that my first communication will exceed by far the limits of a correspondence, when I go on in the same way, and I must break off short. in order to reach France, and especially Paris.

The first thing my eyes met, when we arived at 5 o'clock this morning at Havre, ere uniforms, uniforms of "gens d'armes" -a governmental police, organized on a military footing-and of gardes de donare-custom house guards. France is the land of uniforms. All public officers, of every grade and station, wear them, even Senators, hack and stage drivers, and ruilroad officers, and besides, their beard is dressed in a uniform, NaroLeon-like shape, so that a stranger, who has once seen a picture of the French Emperor, cannot help believing that the whole country was populated by NAPOLEONS. The gens d'armes came on board and took our passports to the police office, while the baggage was taken to the Custom House. The baggage was not searched before 8 o'clock, and our baggage we could not get back before 9; so we had ample time to take breakfast and afterwards a walk around the city and to the sea shore. Havre, which is situated on the about-five-miles-wide mouth of the Seine, has one of the safest and most beautiful and convenient harbors in the world, for a place of its size. That harbor consists of everal spacious basins right in the heart of the town, which all have been artificially dug out, and walled in with masonry.

The searching of our baggage, once commenced, was finished very quickly. It was a mere form, and so was the "visa" of our passports. All the officers, we had to deal with, showed the utmost politeness. At 11 o'clock we set out for Paris, where we arrived in six hours. The distance is 142 miles The French railroads compare very favorably with our American ones. They all have two tracks; they are built better and more solid, than those in the United States, and there is service. The rails are so well laid, that you scarcely perceive a shaking on the cars and in a parlor. Bridges and viaducts are all built of solid brick or quarry stone to last for an eternity. The whole road is fenced in on both the road at certain distances there are station ed "road tenders," whose business it is, con-The commercial advices by these arrivals, stantly to look over that part of the rond,

The slopes of all outs and embankments are as smooth, as they possibly can be, and in all cases they consist of rock or gravel, or pure sand, covered with grass, flowers, shrubs, &c. The depots, especially wonderful buildings, and there is nothing in the United States, which could be compared and as with many of your readers the same with them or could give you the least idea of their spaciousness. I really was astonishgant structures. The railway between Havre and Paris leads through about a dozen tunnels, to pass which took from half a minute to four minutes. June 27th, 1859.

The news of the battle of Solferino you will have received three or four days before this letter possibly can come to your hands. It was spread over the whole French Empire on gage opened and rummaged through. The was spread over the whole French Empire on Saturday morning. I heard it in Havre, widely exaggerated: "The whole Austrian army annihilated," "all the Austrian fortresses taken"--these and similar phrases I on opening and searching through every heard very often, and I found it impossible bundle, and afterwards they extorted, for all such talk was nonsense. It is very diffifrom 20 cents to $1,50. I was smart enough bind the truth, because all reports are onesided-all come from the same source: the Government. The French press is in a deplorable state, and their best papers cannot stand the least comparison with a good American or English country paper. Here an oppressing despotism, and there freedom —that's the world-wide charm which produces such a difference. The freedom of the press is merely nominal; it is the same freedom which once was advocated by a representative of the Germanian Aristocracy—"freedom of the press, but near it the gallows." Native fleece continues in good demand, particularly De Laine qualities, and prices rule firmly; further sales of some 200,000 los have been effected at 40a55c for fine and extra qualities, particularly at 45a50c—this. together with the amount reported by us last week, exceeds the quantity on the market, but dealers have 60 to 90 days for delivering all that has been contracted for—the principal purchasers are the two large De Laine Companies, and they have bought at comparatively lower rates than the prices current in the interior the past month. Our article two weeks since we find has attracted considerable attention in town and country, and some dealers have construed it as unlavorable to able attention in town and country, and some dealers have construed it as unfavorable to their interest. We assure those, however, that they have misconstrued our article. We have not now, nor had we then, the least idea of doing away with the middle men, or dealers—as some have assert.d—for without the regular dealers and dry goods commission merchants, the manufacturing companies could not keep their looms in motion one-half the year. If, therefore, in alluding to facts we touched the sensibility of any speculator, it was with no intention, other than that of correcting existing abuses, which, if heeded, may in day time have a salutary effect. Auractions provoking, for that was her plan.

If any one wishes to know what are those abuses, we have but to point to one—and that is that the majority of the journals of this city are now reporting a quiet and declining market, but any one familiar with the trade knows right well whence those emanate from, and place little or no confidence in them. Daniel E. Sickles and the Tammany Society.

New York, July 14.

At a meeting of the general committee, at Tammany Hall last evening, a resolution was offered declaring the seat of Daniel E. Sickles, who has not altended any of the meetings is of the committee this year, vacant; but as the meeting was called for a special purpose, the resolution was laid over until the next reglar meeting, when it will be acted upon.— It was intimated that Mr. Sickles would probably, in the meantime, resign. There can be no doubt that the original statement in the 1 Tribune, to the effect that most if not all the friends of Sickles have been alienated from his first step, is true. Mr. Butterworth is of this number.

It is said that Sickles has taken a house at Washington for the next session of Congress.

Mr. Sickles is shunned by his old political associates. He walks Broadway and fastens upon every leading man to walk with him.—They cannot shake him off. Sickles joined a leading statesman on Broadway, near Grace Church, one fine morning last week, and walked by his side for about two blocks, when the gentleman spolegized to Sickles for leading the gruing him to buy a book in a store. We heard Major Robinson perform on his fifs this morning, and were astonished that such music could be discoursed from that instrument. The wide fame he has acquired as a fifer has been nobly earned—upon the field of baitle—and is well sustained in all his private and public performances. He is, without doubt, the best fifer in America, playing nearly as well with one hand as with both. At the battle of Pale Alto, when the flag bearer was killed, the Major took the staff in his left hand, and marched at the head of the music, playing with his right hand alone, neither losing step or note, till relieved by order of the commanding officer.

division of the army at Lyons leaves for Italy. Immonse quantities of projectiles continue to be forwarded to the sent of war. Prussia has given positive assurances that the recent measures with regard to her military are not taken with a view to the commencement of hostilities and that France may memernent of hostilities and that France may remain perfectly tranquit on that soore. Contidence had been somewhat restored in the commercial circles of France since the victory of Solerino.

A letter from Lyons says that orders had been received by manufacturers from the U.S. sufficient to compensate them for all they have lost by the war. It was feared, however, that the failure of the sugar crop this year will create serious difficulties for the next year.

But not alone. There was a good deal of very excusable pride in his manner, as he presented his fair young wife to an old school friend, whom he had not met for several years before, and who was doing a prosperous down town business.

It had been a casual encounter on Broadway, such as oftentimes happens. They had walked along together, conversing cordially until at length the corner was reached where their paths diverged. But their say was not half said, and in the warmth of his heart, Wilford invited his friend "Home to tea" with him. Mr. Maynard accepted the other. Six o'clock was his own fashionable dinner hour; but he did not say so; neither did he mention that his wife was at a madias, and probably wouldn't be home at present. And the cordial manner of his friend made him sigh and think of the old times, when he had beeu wont to sit down to dinner just as

It was a genuine old-fashioned "tea"—hot biscutts, amber preserves, delicate pink shadings of dried beef, and cake that would make oven a dyspeptic smack his lips. Maynard could not help complimenting the edibles.—

He didn't get any such at the restaurant where he lunched, and his wife's Irish kitchen corps had an altogether different idea of

"Oh!" said Amy, laughing, "I made them myself."

"Did you?" He looked at her half annused. "I did not know ladies ever employed themselves now-a-days."

"I am a capital cook," said Amy. "We are obliged to study economy somewhat, and so I am my own house-maid."

"Then you don't belong to the rose-leaf sort of ladies, who think it horrible to touch their white lingers to a cooking idensil?"

"No, indeed!" she said, opening her blue eyes in astonishment. "It keeps me healthy and happy; and as Charles has to work hard in the store all day, it is only fair that I should do my part."

"Many are foolish enough to think such things below them," he said, with almost a sigh.

"I don't" said she smiling. "I think things below them, sigh.

"I don't," said she, smiling, "I think nothing below me that helps to make my husband happier, or to brighten ray home." It was a simple little saying, but Maynard pondered on it long. Was it the secret of household bliss?

He looked at her little ctarge of well-second books—the mittar and pile of music in Finally, she came in from the kitchen be-Finally, she came in from the kitchen beyond, the white apron exchanged for a tinier one of black silk, and sat down by the table to work, every now and then joining in the converse with zest and a spirit that seemed the life and spirit of the whole. How proud Wilford was of her. How he appealed to her judgment on every occasion! and how fondly his eyes rested on her blooming face!—She wasn't doing crotchet work; she wasn't embroidering web-like muslin; she was just darning her husband's stockings; and as the shining needle gleamed in an out among the interlacing warp and woof, Maynard thought he had never seen a pretier or more graceful employment.

For Amy brought a spirit and soul to her homely work that would have made the coarsest fabric bright with the tint of Persian looms.

thing very like a sigh. His home was different, far.

He breakfasted alone the next morning—his wife had been out late at a ball and seldom rose before eleven o'clock. The coffee was cold and muddy, even in the frosted silver urn; the toast was burned, the steak sodden and raw; the fire smouldered away under its accumulations of ashes, and he read the morning paper alone, with no bright face opposite to share his interest in each paragraph. The button was off his wristband, but no matter. Clara must not be disturbed—he could just pin it over for the day; his toes peeped out as he changed slippers for boots, but never mind, he would ask Clara to-night where the others were. Pshaw! he could not the crawat to suit him, and fragged it into a limp knot; there was no little wife to stand on tip-toe and arrange it, and then get a kiss for her pains!

He went silently away, with no light footsteps tripping after him to the door; the shadow of no sweet "good bye" following him like a guardian angel on his way—for Clara was a fashionable wife.

At dinner time he came home, half hopeing that there would be a clance and a smile and then pains that there would be a clance and a smile and then pains that there would be a clance and a smile.

At dimer time he came home, half hoping that there would be a glance and a smile like Amy's to great him—a home influence around his huxurious apartments.

Where's Clara?

Where's Clara?'
She lounged on a damask sofa the rings flashing on her shoulder flugers, and her delicate fluger arrayed in folds of lustrons silk, while the slippered foot pueping from beneath secured fit only to treat the roses of life. He sat down, and began drumming catelessly on the table with his fingers.

'Isn't dinner nearly ready.'

'I don't know. It's the cook's business.'

'But she ought to be more regular,' said he. "I can't help that. I wish you wouldn't plague me about such things."
The tone was a little pettish, as Clarabrushed away her brown curls, and resumed her book, and Maynard relapsed into silence again.

Presently another idea struck him.

Presently another idea struck him.

"Can't you play something to night, Clara?

The piano has not been opened in an age.

Come sing me some of the old ballads."

"It can't," she said listlessly; "P m out of practice entirely. Do let me read."

"If you'll lay aside your book after dinner, nd harea good old-fashioned evening of talk nd music goestp."
"Impossible! I am engaged for every moment after seven—the opera first, and then pein at his heart—some void which art could never fill.

The silent dinner was over; she went forth in her shining robes, with pearls in her hair, and bracelets clasping her arms, to an evening of reckless dissipation and gaiety, with smiles for the bean monde but none for home.

Wide Maynard after a long and gloomy reverle by his lonely freside, took his hat and went away to the club, that brilliant place of gaiety and mith, through whose chandeliered portals so many a feet has trod the broad path of destruction!

Poor man—he had no home.

MONDAY, July 15th, 1559. Money Matters, &c.

Rates for exchange and money did not vary any last week. The former was steady, with a supply fully equal to the demand at 1% premium on New York, and the tendency was towards an easier market. If nothing occurs to mar the prospects of a good crop, it is more than probable the stilling rate will soon go down that A thiesay the current rate is 2% cent, though more than probable the reting that was a good, though to 136. At Chicago the current rate is 2 % cent, though it is sold more ov less on the street at 131 premium. The demand for money was very moderate, general mercantile and produce businesses being, as is always the case at this season, extremely quiet; and the banks d no difficulty in accommodating their customer round no dimensional Bank rates, as usual, 10 ?? cent. Brokers' rates 1@2 ?? cent a month. Gold was bought and sold at the same rates as exchange. Not!

The average receipts of wheat were about ree thousand five hundred bushels per day, against an average of twenty-four thousand bushels each day

We have to note a dull produce market for has week with a downward tendency in most articles. The downward movement in wheat and their was more rapid than for any previous week since the great panic, immediately following the war excitement. Wheat declined from 2 to 4c every day up to Friday, when No. 1 vent down 5c, and extra club 10c, and on Saturday there was a plump decline of 5e on both these qual The decline for the week on No. 1 is twenty-two turenty-seren cents. The only ground upon which this extraordinary decline can be accounted for is the now est, together with the anticipations of an early termigeneral, or even go beyond the limits of Italy, the result would be favorable to American breadstuffs markets. But the impression that now obtains impongst whose hands the restriction or expansion of the war now rests, will not be so reckless as to precipitate Europe in a general war, and under the present aspect of affairs, it looks as if Austria would soon be compelled to abandon her pretensions on Italian soil. This may be a superficial view of the matter, but it is certainly the light in which business men look at the subject. The heavy decline is breadstuffs, which immediately owed the last great battle, is strong evidence in fa-

Receipts for the 24 hours ending Saturday noon,

The wheat market opened very dull on Salurday under the influence of the heavy decline on the pravious day at New York, and immediately after the receipt of the eastern despatches, announcing another decline of 3c on wheat, and 10@16c on flour, No. 1 spring droped 5c, buyers refusing to go beyond 70c, at which figure upwards of 4,000 bushels changed hands. There was no extra club on the market, but S5c was the outwent at 15c, and a car load of good No. 2 at 60c. The only sales of extra flour were a couple of small tots of
